

An intranet is a terrible thing to waste.

Few would argue that a good corporate intranet can reduce the cost of doing business. Benefits such as rapid, economical distribution and updating of information to a dispersed workforce, knowledge building, cost and labor reductions, and productivity increases add up quickly when measured across your entire enterprise.

As a matter of fact, there are only two cases in which an intranet yields no benefits: 1. You don't have one. Or, 2. You have one, but it's harder to navigate than the North Atlantic in February.

In either case, we can help by leveraging our experience in intranet design and development for some of the largest companies around. An intranet is truly a terrible thing to waste – let us help you find the value hidden in yours.

Applied Materials® agrees:

HRweb, a Human Resources intranet created for Applied Materials, features global, prioritized navigation, improved content organization, and a visual identity that is aligned with the Applied Materials brand. HRweb is a working example of the Applied Materials commitment to "Information for Everyone."

Visa® International agrees:

Visa Buyer, a database-driven eProcurement portal created for Visa International, has consolidated and streamlined the purchasing process across Visa's various business units. As a result, Visa Buyer has transformed the perception of procurement from impediment to empowerment.
